PROFITS IN FEEDING HOGS

A combination of alfalfa, wheat, and tankage makes a good ration for hogs. This is shown by the experience of W. L. Murray of Perry, Okla. Mr. Murray sold a load of 6 months old Duroc-Jerseys, the other day, which averaged 228 pounds, and topped the Oklahoma City market. These hogs were fed on alfalfa pasture, ground wheat, tankage, and a little corn from the time they were weaned until they were ready for market. The tankage and ground wheat were mixed and fed as a slop. Mr. Murray does not let his pigs get thin during the summer as he believes rapid gains are the most profitable. He weighed the pigs every week and estimates that the wheat fed brought $1.25 a bushel.

The breeding and general method of handling were important factors in the development of these hogs. None but pure-bred hogs, says the Oklahoma Farmer, are used on the Murray farm. Sanitation is another rule that always is strictly enforced. The hogs are fed on concrete floors and given plenty of clean, pure water.

COST OF ENFORCING LIQUOR LAW IN INDIAN COUNTRY

Washington, Jan. 3.—For enforcement of the federal liquor law in Indian country, a part of which will be used in eastern Oklahoma, the house of representatives today voted an item of $125,000 which is $50,000 more than the Indian committee had allowed. Members of the committee thought the states should be given a part of the responsibility of keeping whiskey away from the Indians, and as most of the states where there are Indian reservations are "dry," Chairman Stephens was of the opinion that it did not require as much federal money to enforce the prohibition law as where there are open saloons.

The fact that the federal government is making appropriations of this character, it was brought out, caused practically all the states to abandon efforts to prohibitionize the Indian. Mr. Miller of Minnesota, member of the committee, declares that there will be almost an utter lack of co-operation between the states and the federal government in this work. According to minority Leader Mann, the situation indicated it was not easy to say by legislation that men shall not satisfy their appetites when they have an opportunity.

"We have the Webb law," said he, "yet it takes more money to keep the Indian sober than ever before, and as rapidly as the Indian is made a citizen of a state the more it costs, it seems, to keep him a sober citizen."

Mr. Webb of South Carolina, author of the law referred to, said that the pathetic page in American history is that the American Indian "becomes as helpless as a child in the presence of liquor."

Mr. Bartholdt of Missouri chided the prohibition advocates by asking if it cost $125,000 to enforce the liquor law in Indian country, how much it would cost to enforce national prohibition.

IN MINESGOVERNMENT WILL SAFEGUARD
LIVES OF MINERS — ORDERS
GOVERNING MINING ON SEG-REGATED LANDS.

Washington, Jan. 3. Recommendations of the commissioner of Indian affairs and the director of the bureau of mines, requiring the use of permissible explosives in the coal and asphalt mines on the segregated coal and asphalt lands belonging to the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations in Oklahoma, or, in lieu thereof, the use of an electric shot-firing system operated from outside the mine, became effective Jan. 1, under approval of Secretary Lane of the interior department. The order was originally made effective Aug. 1 last, but suspended until Jan. 1 to permit demonstration of permissible explosives in Oklahoma by engineers of the bureau of mines, and for investigation of the use of electrical shot-firing system, with especial reference to Oklahoma conditions. A statement issued by the department declares the order has in view increasing the health and safety of miners and protecting the property interests of Indian lessors against damage by mine explosions or fires.

Conducted Many Experiments.
During the fall the bureau of mines conducted experiments in twelve typical coal mining operations out of the forty-four coal mines on segregated lands and made exhaustive study of electrical shot-firing systems. A statement from the department says:

"After a thorough consideration of this order in all its bearings, both as regards the miners, operators and Indian lessors, it is ordered that the same be made effective Jan. 1, and that the representatives of both the operators and the miners be advised that the bureau of mines, through its local representative at McAlester, Okla., will receive and act upon individual applications from the operators for an extension of time within which to take steps to comply with the terms of such order. A liberal time will be allowed for this purpose, so that no undue hardship will be imposed.

"This recommendation is based upon the following considerations: "First—The depressed financial condition, which makes it difficult for the coal companies to raise any extensive amount of money at the present time in order to install mining machinery, which should be done in order to use permissible explosives to the best advantage.

"Second—The fact that electric power is not available at present to a considerable number of the operators and that it will necessarily take some time before suitable arrangements to this end can be made.

"Under Keen Competition.
"Third—The operators on segregated lands are subjected to a very keen competition with the coal produced in the non-union mines of Arkansas and Colorado, where mining costs are lower, and also with the coal mines in Oklahoma on the non-segregated lands, which are peculiarly favored with respect to absence of gas and better working conditions. The market for the coal produced from the segregated land is also very much restricted by means of great increases in the production of oil and natural gas in Oklahoma, with which, on the score of cheapness and efficiency in use, coal can not compete.

"Fourth—The change in explosives will probably compel a readjustment of the understanding with the miners with reference to working conditions, and a reasonable time should be allowed for the working out of a satisfactory arrangement, without causing undue hardships to either side or reducing the royalty returns to the Indians."

When a certain North Carolina jurist made his first appearance at the bar as a young lawyer he was giving charge by the state solicitor of the prosecution of a man who was accused of some misdemeanor. Although there was practically no evidence against the man, the youthful attorney did his best, but was astonished when the jury brought in a verdict of "guilty." After the trial one of the jurors tapped the young lawyer on the shoulder. "We didn't think the man was guilty," he explained, "but at the same time didn't like to discourage a young lawyer by acquitting him."

Taxation.
There is a growing discontent in America, against our system of taxation of real estate.

The old method of placing a penalty on real estate improvements by taxation should be discontinued.

The high cost of living comes, in a degree, from the high taxes that are placed on producing land, for these taxes are ultimately paid by the consumer.

The farmer who builds a ten thousand-dollar home increases his tax values in a like amount, so he concludes a $5,000 home will do, and he will save half the tax.

In New Zealand unimproved land is taxed 4 per cent, improved land is taxed from 1-4 to 1 per cent, according to the improvements—the more improvements, the less the tax.

It is time that we should wake up to the fact that it is an error to penalize enterprises and place a premium on inertia.

Idle lands should be taxed into productivity, just as idle men should be taxed into activity. Capital should not be permitted to hide itself in land investments and go practically free from taxation. Home-building should be encouraged. The owner of a home stands for good order, good schools, good roads, liberties, and every other good thing.

Every mother of a child should be a home-owner. It gives her a stronger purpose, freedom from fear, and her mental attitude will be reflected in her children. Bad boys making a garden are good boys. Idle boys, like idle men, usually find something to do. And that something is usually something wrong. Our boys and girls are the finest crop that this country is producing, and we hear the cry, "Back to the farm."

Our big business men of the cities are boys from the farm. It was there they learned to love nature, and they live it still. We are a part of nature, and the better understanding we have of nature, the more efficient and happy we are. —X. Y. Z.

The Girl of Just Now.
The head mistress of a large school for girls in England, who is naturally well acquainted with the modern girl as a class, finds her an admirable type but in danger of becoming selfish. So much has been done for the girl of just now, this teacher says, that she seems sometimes to be inclined to get into the habit of thinking that she will never have to do anything for herself. She has so good a time at school and college that there is some danger of her thinking that she ought always to have as much pleasure. It is in insisting on what she thinks her right to enjoy herself that she sometimes seems a little selfish, a little less capable of self-sacrifice than, say, her grandmother. But she is very charming and interesting, and she will do well if she will realize occasionally that women of other generations have had similar feelings of restlessness and have found an outlet for them in work for others rather than in unprofitable replinings.
